

site the apex, a little farther forward than the centre of the oral surface of the test. The mouth is surrounded by a ring of large oral tentacles. The body is sparsely clothed with fine silky bristles, interspersed with larger paddle-shaped spines.

FIG. 90.—Aërope rostrata, WYVILLE THOMSON. Four times the natural size. (No. 45.)

The temperature both of the air and of the sea was considerably lower than on the previous day. The distance from Sandy Hook was 139 miles at noon. The following day we altered