tions to the science of oceanography. Among those who have not taken an active part in extensive explorations and expeditions, but whose influence on the development of the science has been very great, the names of Ernst Haeckel and Anton Dohrn should be mentioned. Through his voluminous publications on the radiolaria and on other marine groups in the "Challenger" Reports, through his charming Plankton-Studien, and through his more popular writings, Haeckel has created a widespread interest in all marine
