

1200 or 1500 miles, in accordance with the uniformity of the physical conditions. As we have previously seen, uniform physical conditions of a different character are met with along the slopes of the Atlantic from the Wyville Thomson Ridge down to south of the Canaries, the forms peculiar to this region being entirely different to those inhabiting the slopes of the Norwegian Sea.

J. H.

