Finger-shaped processes of the gastral wall, projecting freely into the hollow space of the gastrovascular system, and consisting of solid threads (or tufts of the gelatinous matter of the disk) whose free upper surface is covered by an endodermal epithelium ; this is differentiated into flagellate cells, thread cells, glandular cells, and epithelial muscular cells.

g	Stomachus, Cavitas centralis.	Central cavity, Main cavity.	Centralhöhle, Haupthöhle.

The central principal cavity of the body, sometimes discoid, sometimes bell-shaped, whose central vertical axis also forms the principal axis of the Medusa body. The upper (dorsal or umbral) wall of the gastral cavity is always formed by the solid gelatinous mass of the umbrella (covered by the flat epithelium of the dorsal endoderm), while the lower (ventral or subumbral) wall is formed by the central part of the subumbrella (covered by the high epithelium of the subumbral endoderm) ; the manubrium opens in the centre of the lower wall.
