

PLATE CII.

Euryplegma auriculare, F. E. S.,

PAGE

176

Fig. 1. A specimen, preserved in alcohol, restored ; natural size.

Fig. 2. Inferior fragment of a macerated specimen, from a photograph ; natural size.

Fig. 3. Vertical section of the exterior part of the body ; $\times 50$.

Fig. 4. Discohexaster with long terminal rays in perianth-like arrangement ; $\times 450$.

Fig. 5. Discohexaster with S shaped terminal rays ; $\times 450$.

Fig. 6. Dermal pentact with the ends of the rays rough ; $\times 300$.

For "auricularis" on the Plate read "auriculare."